Call for Papers: American University Law Review's 2022 Federal Circuit Symposium

The American University Law Review is placing a call for submissions of original legal articles and scholarly commentaries for its forthcoming issue dedicated to the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. Specifically, the Law Review seeks submissions analyzing developing areas of patent and trademark law that are of particular interest to the Federal Circuit. One submission for patent law and one submission for trademark law will be selected, with a target publication date slated for early 2023.

The Law Review also seeks to expand its forthcoming issue dedicated to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. Specifically, the Law Review seeks submissions analyzing developing areas of international trade, veterans' law, and government contracts, to be published along with the Law Review's reputable area summaries. At least one international trade, veterans' law, or government contracts piece will also be selected, with a target publication date slated for early 2023.

The American University Law Review is ranked among the top fifty law journals in the country and is the nation's only journal to publish an annual issue dedicated to the Federal Circuit. This issue accompanies the Law Review's annual Federal Circuit Symposium. This year, the Law Review's 37th annual Federal Circuit Symposium will take place in the first week of November 2022. This symposium will explore and engage with burgeoning legal issues in areas of law common to the Federal Circuit, with a particular emphasis on the United States' international footprint. The symposium will feature panels on each field within the Federal Circuit's jurisprudence, convening judges, scholars, and practitioners to discuss cutting-edge legal topics with vigorous audience engagement. authors will have the opportunity to present their work as a panelist at this year's symposium series; however, participation is not a requirement for consideration.

How to Submit

Please submit manuscripts to the Law Review through Scholastica by November 18, 2022. Authors should include a brief abstract and a curriculum vitae (cv) with their manuscript. For more information about Scholastica submissions, see the "Submissions" page on <http://www.aulawreview.org>.

Submission Guidelines

Length: The Law Review values succinct arguments. We strongly prefer manuscripts less than 25,000 words in length, including footnotes. Manuscripts that exceed 30,000 words will be considered only in exceptional circumstances.

Format: Text and citations should preferably conform to The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation (21st ed. 2020). Submissions conforming to the 20th edition of the Bluebook are acceptable; however, the Law Review will edit such citations accordingly. Manuscripts should use footnotes, as opposed to endnotes.

Authorship: The Law Review seeks to publish authors from diverse backgrounds. The Law Review welcomes submissions from professors, judges, and practicing lawyers. We will not consider submissions from students outside the journal's own membership.

About the American University Law Review

Founded in 1952, the American University Law Review is the oldest and largest student-run publication at the American University Washington College of Law (WCL) and publishes six issues each year. As WCL's flagship legal publication, the Law Review is ranked among the top fifty law journals in the United States and is the highest-ranked and most-cited journal at WCL, according to the Washington and Lee University Law Library.

The Law Review receives approximately 1,500 submissions annually and publishes a wide range of legal scholarship from professors, judges, practicing lawyers, and renowned legal thinkers. The Law Review has published articles or commentary by Supreme Court Chief Justices Warren Burger, William Rehnquist, and Earl Warren, as well as Associate Justices Hugo Black, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, and Arthur Goldberg. The Law Review has also published articles or commentary by prominent legal figures such as Stephen Bright, Paul Butler, Erwin Chemerinsky, Tom Goldstein, Paul Kamenar, Judge Paul Michel, Judge Stephen Reinhardt, Nadine Strossen, and Laurence Tribe.

In addition to serving as an academic forum for legal scholarship and a research tool for professors and practitioners, the Law Review is committed to developing the writing and research skills of its staff. The Law Review showcases student-written pieces by publishing Notes and Comments, unrestricted in terms of subject or area of the law, in each issue. In support of the staff, the Law Review has an esteemed faculty advisory board, including Professors Ira P. Robbins, Jonas Anderson, Elizabeth Earle Beske, Barlow Burke, Janie Chuang, Walter Effross, Christine Haight Farley, Paul Figley, Amanda Frost, Egon Guttman, Mary Siegel, David Snyder, and Stephen Wermiel.

A member of the National Conference of International Law Journals, the Law Review is indexed in LexisNexis, Westlaw, HeinOnline, the Index to Legal Periodicals, and the Resource Index/Current Law Index. Each edition of the Law Review is distributed nationally and abroad to law school libraries, private law firms, public legal organizations, and individual subscribers.

With more than sixty years of publications, the Law Review has a strong national and international alumni network, including judges and practitioners in every field.

The Law Review also houses an online companion publication called the Forum. The Forum serves as a platform to generate timely discussion of scholarship published in the Law Review's print issues. It enables the academic discourse within the Law Review's print issues to continue after publication. The Forum also creates more opportunity to advance student-written scholarship by publishing Notes and Comments written by Law Review staff members. Like the print publication, the Forum is available on HeinOnline, Westlaw, and LexisNexis, as well as through the Law Review's website.
